To Be Played 100 Years Hence—Other Musical Gossip and News.

THE National Opera of France has built a vault in Paris, into which are to be deposited the recorded works of present day musicians. This "caveau" will remain unopened during a whole century, at the end of which time the records will be taken forth and played to the people of that time. This month the ceremony of interring some Saint-Saens and Caruso records is to be observed, and the directors are also honoring Renee Chomet by including a few of her records in the same hermetically sealed urn. Mme. Chomet will be remembered here as one of the New York Philharmonic Society's violin soloists last season.

Walter Damrosch in his memoirs, now appearing in The Ladies Home Journal, writes that the profits of the first thirteen weeks of the Damrosch Opera Company, his first venture as owner and director, amounted to $55,000. But "I add," he writes, "I did not retain this quickly gained fortune a long time."

"All my friends except one urged me to go on with the work. The one exception was Andrew Carnegie, who said with that canny business acumen which made him one of the world's richest men:

"Walter, you have made a great success artistically as well as financially; your profits have been enormous. But such a success rarely repeats itself immediately. You rightly divined the desire of the public for a return of Wagner opera, but this current has drawn into it many people who have come from curiosity and to whom Wagner is still a closed book. Many of these will not come back another time. Be content to rest on your laurels."

"When we finally arrived in New York I had already lost a great part of the large profits of the year before, and this loss was further increased by my season at the Academy of Music. "Though the balance sheet of the five months' season showed a loss of $43,000, the larger part of my gains the year before, I cannot say that my wife and I were very much cast down, although optimistic and the loss of money is in itself not such a dreadful calamity if one still has enough to pay one's debts; and all this time I was adding to my experience and artistic stature."

Ignace Paderewski will be heard in his second piano recital at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, December 16.

Mme. Slazid Oseff, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who made her American debut recently with the Philadelphia Orchestra and who appeared for the first time at the Metropolitan Opera House on last Wednesday evening, will give her first New York concert on Wednesday evening, December 6, at Carnegie Hall. This recital will also mark the New York debut of Michel Raudenbach, who will be at the piano for Mme. Oseff. Even the furniture has been thrown into the scrap pile to make way for the radio apparatus which will be used to broadcast the Sunday afternoon "pop" concerts of the City Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dick Foch. From the box which Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein reserved for her personal use after the death of her husband, the music will be picked up for broadcast.

Many Will Spend Thanksgiving Day at Atlantic City

New Yorkers Among Those Who Will Visit Resort for Holiday.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE NEW YORK HERALD. ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 25.—Many persons from New York City and nearby places have made reservations at hotels here for Thanksgiving Day and some days preceding and following it. There will be special holiday entertainment and menus at many of the hotels. Reservations for Christmas week are also beginning to be received here.

The Masons of Atlantic City are just about to start a campaign to raise a building fund of $200,000 to be devoted to the construction of the proposed Masonic Temple at Ventnor avenue and Hartford terrace, facing the City Park and not far from the new $1,600,000 high school which is now being built.

The City Commission is divided on the problem of financing the full payment of next year. One group of citizens urged that the city appropriate $100,000 for the fete. None of the city rulers would countenance that proposal. The question now is whether there should be an appropriation of $50,000 or $25,000. The Catholic Daughters of America are building headquarters on South Pennsylvania avenue between Atlantic and Pacific avenues. The building will have rooming and dining accommodations for young women visiting the city.

Mr. Harrison Cook, manager of the Seaside House, is visiting Bermuda. The hotel men who visit the Hotel Exposition in New York are congratulating Harry Latz, manager of the Alamac, for this city's exhibit at the show. The resort was represented at the exposition by N. N. L. Jones, president of the Atlantic City Hotel Men's Association; Charles Wood, president of the Avenue Hotel Association; John C. Benson, secretary of the former association and personal representative of the Traymore, and Oscar Painter, proprietor of the Grand Atlantic.
